

Khomas Police receives training equipment

POLICE work isn't all about busting the baddies and letting sirens wail.

Constant training and education is an essential process in developing world class law enforcement professionals. Some police officers specialise in particular fields, such as chemical and microscopic analysis, training and firearms instruction, or handwriting and fingerprint identification. This however is not possible if the force is not well trained or equipped with the latest technologies, information and other relevant gadgets.

It is no secret that the Government alone cannot supply all the necessary resources and welcomes the contributions of the private sector. Trustco made a decision to sponsor the Khomas Region police with computer equipment for their Training Department.

On Tuesday Amos Shiyuka of Trustco presented senior NamPol officials with a top of the range laptop and multi-media projector.

"We would like to encourage all Police applicants to take courses or training related to law enforcement subjects after high school, to improve and enhance their knowledge. Many entry-level applicants for police jobs have completed some formal post-secondary education, and a significant number are college graduates," Shiyuka said at the ceremony.

Detective Chief Inspector Fabian Museu thanked Trustco for the equipment and said it would be used for training officers in customer care, police professionalism, briefing of political dignitaries and used in meetings at regional level.
